

AI will correct our country's fourth ranked core of corruption, entrenched bureaucracy

Although elected officials arise to the top of any listing of sources of corruption ranked in order of impact, from the President, Congress, etc., including state and local elected authorities, and our many courts' evolving interpretative interventions, entrenched bureaucracy is the insidious beast within.

Repeating throughout government, regardless of branch, is the entrenched bureaucrat and their inside control over the implementation of our government's policies. Commonly college recruits that trade the less paid but steady path of government employment verses earning more by entering private commerce with its associated risks.

Within that steady path, however, is the potential to direct the government's assertions of power to build a career that concludes post earning a government pension into employment by the very entities that they had just previously held control over. Ingratiation is fundamental to seamless integrating the safety of spending twenty years within the government to earning a top tier industry salary that then returns them to working back directly with their former colleagues, most of which were subordinates, now lining up for their turn at the old quid pro quo.

It is the personal ambition aspect that AI will eradicate to the immediate benefit of everyone except those that abuse power on both sides of that career path. AI will forever do the job it is assigned strictly to the ethics entered and with no pension penalty. Not looking to befriend future benefactors, nor abuse its authority through selective enforcement.
